NEVADA'S FUTURE.

Under the caption of "Nevada's Future" the Salt Lake Tribune contains the following:

"The Tribune yesterday gave an account of the uncovering of a mighty rich ore deposit in White Pine county, Nevada. Yesterday there were three stalwart miners in this city on their way East, who last autumn started out from Los Angeles with only two or three donkeys and a little mining outfit. They went over the low divide between Los Angeles and this basin and continued until they reached Yellow Pine district where they took up some claims and went to work. Fifteen days ago they sold out a part of their claim for $65,000 and yesterday they were here on their way to the World's Fair. Incidentally they reported also that Hon. A. G. Campbell had no end of mines in the same district and that in a little while more he would be so rich that he could take his choice, either of paying up the national debt and owning the United States, or to go abroad and buy an Empire of his own, all of which is most satisfactory news to his many friends in this region. But what we began to say was that these two incidents, the discovery in White Pine county and the developments and the sale in the Yellow Pine district, simply tend to corroborate what the Tribune has always insisted on, that among mining States and Territories Nevada, after all, is the very chief; that with cheapened and more convenient communication that State will re-assert itself as the foremost mining State of the Union. It has gone through twenty years of hard times. Its one railroad has run through a portion of the State from 100 to 150 miles North of the great mineral belt. The South part of the State has been almost a closed book, and the result has been that the State has lost its people, in property and in prestige, but its revival is bound to come. We do not know when this people will be able to start their road West, but when they shall be, there will be a transformation in Nevada which will astonish those who only think of it as a desert State, a State so poor and sparse in population that to call it a State is a burlesque. It is a great country, and time will vindicate that assertion. It is a great mining State, at least inasmuch as the silver mine in our country was found there, and inasmuch as no other such mine as that has ever been found, so we may expect that when the reaction comes and the conditions change it will once more vindicate the belief of those who know the State well, that in natural mineral resources it is the foremost State in this Union."

Do the California authorities know what has become of See Chuck?

He killed a man in open day in the streets of San Francisco about three years ago and was caught red handed. While no doubt could exist of his guilt but jury after jury disagreed, and documents were captured to show that it cost $30,000 for them to disagree.

He was finally committed and sentenced to 50 years imprisonment. Where is he now? Why he is in China and doing well?

Probably some one in California may be able to tell why he is in China and doing well?

Mr. Cleveland's plea for doing nothing is said to be that "these western and southern silver lunatics must be taught a lesson." It looks to a man up a tree as if the whole country was being taught a lesson, and a very expensive one, too.—Lode.

News comes from Chicago that the silver statue of Justice modeled after Ada Rehan is bow-legged. Will some one who is familiar with Ada's legs, inform the APPEAL whether this is a libel on Ada or not.

The News in speaking of a funeral says "a line of carriages followed in the rear." Such things are only deserving of mention when they "follow in front."
